

Raymond Leduc
Director, Bromont Manufacturing
IBM Canada Ltd.

Raymond Leduc heads IBM's largest semiconductor assembly and test site in Bromont, QC, which produces microelectronic components for all of IBM's leading products as well as the microprocessor components for Microsoft's XBox 360, the Nintendo Wii, and Sony's Playstation 3.

Raymond joined IBM in 1981. He has held various management positions in engineering, manufacturing, finance before being named Director of the Bromont plant in 2003.

Raymond is a member of the National Research Council and vice-chair of the Canadian Manufacturers and Exporters. He is a graduate of McGill University's mechanical engineering and MBA programs, and also holds the ICD.D certification.