

A call for...

Organizations Committed to Health, Safety and Wellness

Are you searching for effective solutions to managing employee health, morale, safety, and productivity challenges? Our Council on Workplace Health and Wellness provides an exclusive network experience to develop strategic insights about how workplace health management can address increasingly complex human capital issues and improve organizational performance.

The Council also provides an unmatched opportunity for health, safety and wellness professionals to discuss the impact of workplace health on improving productivity, reducing health care costs and improving morale. The lessons learned and the partnerships formed enable organizations to be positioned for future success as an employer of choice.

What network members are saying...

"Being a member of this council is an integral part of my role as a leader in the corporate health and wellness field. Every meeting and conference call roundtable allows me to contribute, debate and validate current corporate health strategies. After each meeting, I walk away with a renewed energy which helps create a new focus on health strategies for my workplace."

—Janet Crowe, Director, Wellness and Work Life Solutions, TELUS Communications

Key Features

Our network meetings are held three times a year in cities across Canada. Thought leaders in workplace health, wellness and safety facilitate discussions within an agenda tailored to members' needs.

A members' roundtable is held at each meeting. This allows members to share challenges and successes, and seek advice, ideas or feedback.

Our network has a members-only website where members can access meeting agendas, past presentations, and other relevant information.

Membership Fee

The annual membership fee of $3775 covers membership from June 1, 2011 to May 31, 2012. Membership is prorated for those who join mid-year.
