Resilience 2019: Enhancing Resilience Through Knowledge

April 3rd, 2019
Regina

Agenda

LOCATION

University of Regina
3903 Wjbazuka Rd.
Regina, SK
College West Building

Meeting Objectives:

- Explore how a range of organizations are enabling resilience in different contexts.
- Identify lessons that can improve your resilience in future emergencies.
- Learn from case studies that draw from regional perspectives.
- Gain an understanding of how you can build resilience through the Regional Resilience Assessment Program (RRAP).
- Discuss how resilience can be enhanced through insurance.
- Learn about best practices and strategies to get the most from your investment in exercises while directly contributing to building resilience in your organization.
- Network and learn with peers – share new approaches, insights and challenges and exchange ideas with leading experts.

The term “resilience” has a number of definitions. At its core is the ability of an entity to limit the impact of an emergency and return to normal quickly. In the context of a rapidly evolving emergency environment, where major disasters are becoming larger, more frequent and ever more complex, it is vital that organizations and communities improve their resilience or risk being overwhelmed by a disaster.

In an intimate setting, the Conference Board’s Resilience roundtables brings together cutting-edge insights from a range of perspectives to enable organizations and communities to enhance their resilience to a range of potential emergencies. From insurance and improved risk assessment to leadership, there are a range of approaches that can be taken to enhance resilience.

Location to be confirmed

8:00 a.m. Registration and Refreshments

8:30 a.m. Welcome and Opening Remarks

Deborah Fleck, Senior Network Manager, National Security and Public Safety, The Conference Board of Canada

Trefor Munn-Venn, Co-Leader, Rhapsody Strategies

9:00 a.m. Presentation and Discussion: *Enhancing Resilience Through Insurance

Rob de Pruis, Director, Consumer and Industry Relations, Western Insurance Bureau of Canada

Insurance is widely recognized as being fundamental to the ability of communities and even countries to recover more quickly from disasters. Where government aid flows slowly, insurance operates more quickly. Where government aid only helps address basic needs, insurance can more fully indemnify home and business owners, allowing them to fully recover. Insurance can also help governments, by putting money in their hands quickly allowing them to address critical needs post disaster. Government aid programs contain no incentive to mitigate risk, but because insurance pricing is tied to risk, it rewards mitigation and helps create a culture of resilience.

10:00 a.m. Presentation and Discussion: *Building Resilience Through the Regional Resilience Assessment Program (RRAP)

James Gulak, Senior Emergency Management Officer (Prairie Region)
Public Safety Canada

The Regional Resilience Assessment Program (RRAP) is a comprehensive risk assessment program for owners and operators of Canadian Critical Infrastructure (CI). This program features site assessments to help organizations measure and improve their resilience to all hazards in Canada, such as cyber threats, accidental or intentional man-made events, and natural catastrophes.

11:00 a.m. Break

11:15 a.m. Presentation and Discussion: *Practice Makes Perfect: Resilience Through Exercises

Shawn Corrigan, Business Development Executive, Emergency Management
Calian Group Ltd.

It is well recognized that one of the most cost-effective way to prepare and confirm readiness of an organization and its plans to deal with events is to exercise. Unfortunately, it is also true that exercise is often neglected in most emergency management programs. How many organizations have a fully funded, multi-year exercise program? Who has an exercise program linked to performance metrics and can track the return on investment for every dollar spent on training and exercise? Who works for an organization where senior management is afraid of pushing the envelope by fear of looking bad during an exercise? What about the feeling of being stuck in the infamous lessons learned trap? Would you be shocked to discover that most organizations have adopted the flash in the pan approach to exercises and have no dedicated resources to support the planning and conduct of exercises? In this presentation, Shawn will share his personal experiences, best practices, point out some challenges and trends while sharing some strategies to get the most from your investment in exercises while directly contributing to building resilience in your organization.

12:15 p.m. Networking Lunch

1:00 p.m. Presentation and Discussion: Risk and Resilience – Adapting to the Challenges in Northern Indigenous Communities

Jason Ryan, Life Safety and Protective Measures Consultant
RYCOM Solutions Group Inc.

2:00 p.m. Presentation and Discussion: *A Contemporary Framework for Resilience

Dr. Nick Carleton, Professor of Psychology
University of Regina

The recent laudable focus on helping persons exposed to potentially traumatic events has raised important discussions about potential preventative measures that may help mitigate the impact of such events on mental health. The discussions have often focused on developing, maintaining, or recovering resilience. Indeed, there are now several different training programs available that have been designed to influence resilience. The current presentation will provide a foundation for understanding the complex opportunities associated with resilience, starting with the discourse on defining individual, group, and systemic resilience relative to other constructs, such as resistance and self-care. The presentation will then offer a broad overview of current peer-reviewed research associated with resilience and the important opportunities for innovation and development going forward. The presentation may raise more questions than answers but will conclude with high-level recommendations for facilitating evidence-based best practices.

3:00 p.m. Break

3:15 p.m. Presentation and Discussion: *Resilience from the Top: Leadership in Emergency Management

Trefor Munn-Venn, Co-Leader
Rhapsody Strategies

In the after-action review of almost every major emergency management event, two themes almost always emerge: Leadership and Communications. In this talk, Trefor will walk you through a framework for leadership along with the corresponding best practices and emerging “next practices” that will define the future of leadership in emergency management.
